DEPARTMENT OF JAPANESE LANGUAGE

Message on the Occasion of the 2020 Induction Ceremony

To the magnificent 21st incoming batch of students of the Soka Ikeda College of Arts and Science for Women, I offer my deepest congratulations.

My wife, Kaneko, and I applaud you with our whole hearts; you who have entered this College with your burning passion and lofty desire to learn amidst the unabated ordeal of the global COVID-19 pandemic.

I would also like to extend my sincerest felicitations and appreciation to the family members who, with such goodwill and generosity, have sent their cherished daughters to this College despite difficult social circumstances.

Twenty years have passed since the birth of Soka Ikeda College of Arts and Science for Women, a bastion of women’s education and a bastion of humanistic education. In that time, the College has developed and progressed remarkably. I can only imagine the happiness of Chairman Dr. Sethu Kumanan, Principal Dr. M. Samshath and all the members of the faculty and administration as they welcome this new intake of women with their seeking spirits—the shining treasure of India who represent hope for humanity’s future.

The darker an era becomes, the more brilliant is the light that emanates from solidarity of the soul in the realm of culture and education.

In this regard, I am reminded of the friendship forged between Mahatma Gandhi, the father of your esteemed nation, and Leo Tolstoy, the distinguished literary luminary of Russia. As Tolstoy wrote: “There is only one thing in this world which is worth dedicating all your life. This is creating more love among people and destroying barriers which exist between them.”

The two men established a friendship through a correspondence that lasted barely a year. Yet, the light of that friendship casts an immortal glow over all humanity.

Even if unable to meet in person, the resonance between two virtuous souls can become an uplifting force that infinitely enhances the splendour of life.

You are blessed with treasured friends, wonderful fellow sisters in this school with whom you share mystic bonds. You are blessed also with teachers who have wholeheartedly dedicated themselves to the sacred vocation of education.

Wherever you may find yourself in the course of your life, in your heart you will always be united with your fellows here. No matter the circumstances, you are able always to encourage and inspire one another. This is your pride as students of this College. And Kaneko and I join you in this noble camaraderie.

There may be times in your life at which you find yourself at an unexpected impasse. I hope then that you will remember these words of Mahatma Gandhi: “You should be patient and not worry. Whatever happens has to be suffered cheerfully.” “You were born to carry out difficult things.”

I call on you to unfold the limitless potential of your youthful lives, to bring to bloom the flowers of peace, happiness and hope in your communities, in society and in the world.

The ancient Thirukkural contains a sentiment to the following effect, which I would like to dedicate to you in closing: Just as the length of the stalk of a water flower is in proportion to the depth of the water, so a person’s greatness is in proportion to their mind.

Kaneko and I earnestly pray that each of you, our most cherished students, will enjoy good health, victory and a life of profound fulfillment. We shall always be fondly watching over you. Please be well!
